9:15 Professional development for you

11:05 Mama book clubs

12:10 A 3-step system

15:05 Let the kids speak

"The wonderful thing about these events, all of these Book Club events, is that you don't just connect your kids with authors and with books, although that's certainly what's happening here, but you also form meaningful and lasting connections with each other in your family – that's the thing I treasure more than anything."

Quotes and Questions

* Help your kids fall in love with books

"What we actually hear from members after these events is that the next time they're at the library their kids run to the section to find more books by that author or illustrator or the books that that author or illustrator mentioned as their own childhood favorites because they feel like they're seeking out books written by a friend. They have a completely different personal connection with the author, the illustrator, and the work than they've ever had before. So, if you want to help your kids fall in love with books, trust me, this is how you do it."

* Replace your literature curriculum

"You can really do literature as a family and make this more of a cohesive whole, restful, joyful part of your homeschool. It really helps you dive deep into books, it helps you nurture your family relationships at the same time, and that's such a win."

* Your kids will engage with books in a new way

"I really think your kid's relationship with books will never be the same once they engage in books this way and once they meet the authors and illustrators themselves. There is just nothing like it ..."
